Under a less-optimistic (1.5 feet) of sea level rise, the landscape of Louisiana may be unrecognizable by the year 2065. Even under a moderate (0.6 feet) scenario of sea level rise, by 2100 not it, eventually settling the Lafourche River carried as much as a third of the River's flow and sediment.

A photograph showing a wooden frame under construction. Several vertical wooden studs are connected to horizontal base plates using metal brackets secured with screws. The structure is built on a wooden subfloor. In the foreground, a clipboard with a silver clip is resting on a piece of cardboard. The clipboard has a white sheet of paper with handwritten text. The background shows more of the wooden structure and the subfloor.
